Dear Sir,

Housing in Hindsland/Morning Mills Farm

I wish to make two points regarding the above proposal.

1. Bearing in mind that the South East of England, together with other areas, has been declared a drought area, I would quote from the Environmental Secretary, Caroline Spelman, MP, "that she has warned that families may have to rely on standpipes in the street next year if the UK gets a third dry winter in a row". Therefore, what sensible authority would agree to extra planning for houses at the present time.

2. A proposed building site with access on to the Eastbourne Road would add to extra traffic volume in this area. The Eastbourne Road is extremely busy at the beginning of the morning and in the evening. As a person who was involved in traffic census for eight years for the Ministry for Transport, I would suggest that a full survey of the A2270 be carried out before any decisions are made.

I hope the above comments are duly considered.

Yours faithfully,

R. F. Brundle.
